Winter in the Hunter Valley brings cold nights, hard frost and August winds. We keep our stone fireplace well stocked with ironbark timber and the menu leans towards refined comfort food.

Kelly and Simon's Little Hill Farm introduce small batches of the outstanding heritage Joyce's Gold chickens, a testament to their values of quality birds and ecological farming practices.

Local citrus is handpicked, juiced, zested, salted and preserved for the year's citrus kosho.

The rich loam soil of the Morpeth Hunter River flats are producing the absolute best brassicas of the region, which dominates the menu in winter. Think purple dragon wombok, savoy, white and sugar loaf cabbages, spigarello, broccoli, purple and white cauliflowers and kales.

In the chef's garden the last of the golden passionfruit is picked and fermented. Nasturtiums, varieties of radish, mustard leaf, sorrels and peas all begin to produce.
